Personal Emergency Response Systems

Personal Emergency Response Systems typically consist of a small electronic device worn as a pendant or wristband that allows an individual to call for help in any emergency. When pushed, the 24-hour monitoring center will assess the situation and can determine whether a visit from a designated family member or neighbor is needed, or if emergency services are required, and can contact them directly. Systems require a private phone line and work in the home or yard up to 800 feet from the rotary or touch- tone phone.

Many systems have an optional reminders feature, in addition to the standard unit, that allows reminder messages to be recorded. Reminders can be set up to play: daily, weekly or just once, and can be added or changed from any touch-tone telephone.
